Cykel AI Expands Platform Accessibility with Launch of Web App

Cykel AI PLC (LSE: CYK), a leader in AI-powered business automation, today announced the launch of its new web app, expanding the accessibility and feature set of its cutting-edge AI automation platform.

Key Highlights:

- Cykel web app now live, complementing the existing browser extension
- Offers full feature set including Workflows, Context, and enterprise organisation management
- Enhances team collaboration and flexibility in automation management
- Additional integrations launched alongside the web app

The Cykel web app provides an alternative platform for users to run and manage their automations, offering greater flexibility and accessibility across different devices and work environments. This expansion ensures that all team members can leverage Cykel's powerful AI automation tools in the manner most suitable to their individual needs and preferences.

Jonathan Bixby, Co-Founder of Cykel AI, commented: "The launch of our web app marks a significant milestone in Cykel's mission to create an intelligent automation layer for internet-based operations. By offering our full suite of features through both a browser extension and now a web app, we're empowering teams to work more efficiently and collaboratively. This flexibility allows organisations to seamlessly integrate our AI automation into their existing workflows, regardless of individual team members' preferred platforms or devices."

The web app launch is accompanied by the release of additional integrations, further expanding the capabilities of Cykel's AI automation platform. These new integrations enhance the platform's ability to connect with a wider range of tools and services, providing users with even more opportunities to streamline their operations.

Cykel AI's web app maintains the company's commitment to robust security and data protection, ensuring that users can confidently manage their automations and sensitive data across multiple access points.

This launch represents Cykel AI's ongoing dedication to innovation in the AI automation space, providing businesses with cutting-edge tools to enhance productivity, reduce repetitive tasks, and focus on strategic initiatives.
